Vince DiBlasi is a member of Sullivan & Cromwell's Litigation Group. After joining the Firm in 1978, he built a global reputation representing clients in several of the largest financial services industry cases of the past two decades.

Mr. DiBlasi has served as lead counsel to clients in major investigations, such as:

- the insider trading and market manipulation cases of the late 1980s;
- the government securities investigations arising from the Salomon Brothers Treasury auction scandal;
- the pay-to-play investigations in the municipal securities market;
- the Orange County litigation and investigation;
- various Enron-related matters;
- investigations into practices related to IPOs and research analysts;
- investigations relating to market timing of mutual funds; and
- representation of several clients in connection with litigation and investigations concerning allegedly "back dated" options.

Mr. DiBlasi is currently representing clients in litigation arising from mortgage-related securities, liquidity concerns and auction rate securities.

He has handled many investigations by the Securities and Exchange Commission and self-regulatory organizations such as the New York Stock Exchange, National Association of Securities Dealers and Chicago Board Options Exchange, including trials.

Mr. DiBlasi also regularly represents leading investment banking firms in connection with major legal developments affecting the investment banking industry.
